A Hotel Staffed by Robots

Would you stay in a hotel staffed by robots? A hotel staffed by robots may sound too futuristic to be true, but this is actually happening within Huis Ten Bosch theme park in Nagasaki.

The world's first hotel staffed almost entirely by robots opened in Japan not a long time ago. Too futuristic to be true? It is here now and functioning successfully. Located in Huis Ten Bosch theme park in Nagasaki, the hotel whose name 'Henn-na' translates as 'strange hotel,' is pushing the boundaries of robotics. For some hotel guests the experience may prove extremely disconcerting. How far should we trust an android?

Be reassured, though; the hotel blurb says 'please feel free to enjoy conversing with these warm and friendly robots as they efficiently go about their work.' And there are some humans around to ensure everything is running as it should.

The reception desk in this 72-roomed hotel is staffed by a trio of robots, who blink, appear to breathe and politely guide you towards your check-in.

Not all are humanoid. There's also a robotic dinosaur to help check you in, but whatever their shape, they are polite, speak English, Japanese and Korean. Luggage is whisked away by an automated trolley and delivered to your room.

Doors are fitted with facial recognition technology so no key cards are needed and the room temperature is regulated according to your own body heat. Each room comes with its own bedside, doll-like robot in pink and white with three hearts on its forehead. It acts as your in-room concierge and will tell you the weather forecast, the time and turn the lights on or off when you are tucked in bed.

There is a tablet device (depending on room type) where you can watch TV and order room service delivered by robots who also clean the rooms.

There's no mini-bar or bathrobes but there are modern amenities such as hair drier and kettle and Wi-Fi is available throughout the hotel.

The robots have been designed by a company called Kokoro who has been developing 'actroids' for more than a decade. And the concept of a hotel served by robots is the brain-child of Hideo Sawads, president of Huis Ten Bosch. He said 'In the future 90 per cent of the hotel's services could be carried out by robots.' Does that mean they won't need tipping?

This may seem disconcerting as you wonder how a world without the human touch will feel even though efficiency levels may be higher and budget travellers can enjoy lower room rates. And how lonesome will it be for a solo traveller whose only engagement is with a machine?

And yes there will be some humans on staff but there is the uncomfortable thought that for every robot in service a human being may have been sacrificed.

Rooms rates at the Henn-na Hotel start from around £40 (Y7,000) per night.
